School Board President

Jonathan Narcisse
wants to close
Central Academy

Narcisse's anti-Central Academy position should be loud and clear to teachers, students and parents

On August 12, Narcisse sent an email to thousands of people saying that he wants to end "elite prep academies for the privileged few." And to accomplish that, he wants to elect three new School Board members. TRANSLATION: CENTRAL ACADEMY WOULD BE CLOSED!

On numerous appearances on WHO Radio, Narcisse told hate-talk radio host Steve Deace that the International Baccalaureate program taught everything from "communism" to "paganism." TRANSLATION: THE IB PROGRAM WOULD BE OVER!

And to this day, Narcisse continues to LIE about the cost of Central Academy's new home at the Wallace-Homestead Building, falsely claiming the school district spent $2 million too much, all in an effort to disrespect the teachers, students and parents of Central Academy.

But it's not too late. On September 9, say "no" to the three Narcisse candidates:

STEVE FLOOD: A West Des Moines businessman who sends his kids to private schools, he believes we should teach Intelligent Design (i.e. Creationism) in high school science classes.

MIKE PIKE: An east-side small businessman who sends his only school-age child to a Baptist school, Pike (along with Flood and Crisman) is endorsed by the Iowa Christian Alliance.

KRIS CRISMAN: Her experience consists of operating an in-home day care center. Crisman (along with Flood and Pike) is endorsed by the Iowa Family Policy Center, which advocates teaching religion in school.

These candidates have shown the commitment and dedication we should expect in School Board members:

Kittie Knauer
Dick Murphy
Ginny Strong
Jeanette Woods

On September 9, save Central Academy and vote for candidates who support excellence in public education.
